Good wine ☞ from a good company ☞

This portfolio is a culmination of many years of research, learning and building relationships within the wine community. We champion fine wines that have a true sense of place, from growers in the world's great regions.

As a young company we embrace new ways of working while understanding that the nature of wine means face-to-face, human interactions and outstanding customer service are paramount to ours and your success. We are working hard to ensure our brand values aligned with our supply partners and customers alike and that they are etched into all that we do.

We combine our customer-first mindset with a deep understanding of our wines and producers, knowledge of our markets and a thirst for continuous learning and improvement.

Our goal is to positively influence our industry by scrutinising our entire supply chain – from vineyard to table – to alleviate pressure on our planet.

Whisson Lake

In 1985 Mark Whisson chose one of the steepest and highest altitude sites in the Adelaide Hills' Piccadilly Valley exclusively to plant Pinot Noir. Whisson Lake now stands as South Australia's most coveted producer of fine Pinot, delivering wines of nuance, structure and finesse. Widely regarded for their reds, the estate also produces an outstanding 'Gris de Noir' (white Pinot Noir) in cool vintages.

Spider Bill

Obsessed with site expression, Tarrant Hansen has quietly made a name for his label as a hidden gem within the Adelaide Hills. Hansen's background in medicine is evident in his millimetre perfect approach to growing and production of both classic Adelaide Hills wine as well as more exotic varieties from Italy. Of particular note, his Chardonnay expressions are some of the 'Hill's finest.

Since his first overseas vintage in Tuscany, Sam Scott has been obsessed with the production of Italian varieties in Australia. Using a combination of traditional European winemaking techniques; long maceration and no additions, and new-world tech, Scott's wines show the suitability of these Italian grapes to the Australian landscape and show an ethereal quality seldom found in wines of this value.

Heavily influenced by new-wave European styles – especially the crisp reds and whites of the Jura where he worked alongside Marin Fumey of Fumey–Chatelain – these are contemporary (predominantly) Barossa bottling of real elegance. Not feeling the need to confine his range to one region, in true negociant style Sven seeks fruit from the cooler Adelaide Hills, Langhorne Creek and even the Jura itself for a very special oxidative white in some vintages.

Le Potazzine

Le Potazzine is one of Tuscany's smallest and most celebrated grower producers. Gigliola Giannetti and her daughters embody the best of timeless, site driven Italian wine that bears the hallmarks of Montalcino with an unexpected ethereal quality. For the cognoscenti, there are very few estates that achieve this sought-after combination of lightness, elegance and hint of salinity.

Castell'in Villa

Despite her reluctance to be in the spotlight, Coralia Pignatelli is one of Tuscany's most iconic and revered producers of ultra-classical Chianti Classico. These are multi-faceted wines of immense structure, crystal purity and unrivalled longevity. Put simply, her Castell'in Villa estate transcends its region and denomination to produce what are simply some of the finest wines in Italy.

Torre a Cona

A jewel of the Florentine hills, Torre a Cona is an estate of immense cultural significance and natural beauty. Spanning 20ha, vineyards are dedicated to Sangiovese and other 'classic' Chianti varieties of Colorino and Malvasia. The delicious wines from here are supple, elegantly balanced, and – in the case of the single-site expressions – extremely long-lived.

Pandolfa

Though the estate was founded in the 1940's, it's been in the last decade that Tenuta Pandolfa has been at the forefront of the renaissance of regional winemaking in Emilia Romagna. Tending certified organic vineyards of Sangiovese di Romagna, these are wines of an individual character, deep and textured with supple tannins and plenty of drive. The Noelia Ricci single-site wines are the estate's purest expression of the terroir, displaying lightness and minerality.

Tenuta di Fessina

Silvia Maestrelli's legacy lives on through her estate's continued exploration of the fine terroirs of Etna. Tenuta di Fessina are truly in a league of their own crafting scintillating, mineral white wines from eastern and southern Etna. The reds from here are equally thrilling, minimally handled in the winery to show the territory's properly unique hallmarks.
